

Scribe for Run Number : 2251

Date: 8th Feb 2017

Location: Kuang

Hare: Soo.....

Co-hares: many many people ☐

Guest: guest who are almost aren't supposed to be guest anymore

Leaving office to go to the run site on that day was a breeze as the traffic was fantastic probably due to the CNY 2017 holidays which were still on-going for some. The site was not too tough to find thanks to the coordinates given and the invention of Google Map.

Driving thru the winding road I thought to myself this could be interesting as it's a new run site that I have never been to. Upon arriving the car parking area, noted that the run will be in an oil palm plantation. In my own private space I was thinking to myself that today's run will be energy consuming due to the terrain and sandy ground. Anyway, I thought about it again and told myself, since I am already there to torture myself, might as well just do it.

As how it is every week, 6pm, time to burn a few calories arrive and it was time to run, GM called ON ON and everyone went on into the trail. The hare and his comrades did a very fantastic good job at throwing us off the trail during the checks and many a times it manages to gather all the runners and walkers which is a good thing. After all the running, we finally were back "home". As usual, everyone made it back safely. Good Job Hare & Co-Hare!!!

After resting and cleaning up, it was time to go for "On On" and we all proceeded accordingly as we would do every week. The meal served was fantastic and 1 lucky Hasher got a free On On for being able to guess the value per head for that night's dinner. Circle was conducted and everything was as per usual, intro of very very old guest, updates, info distribution and charges. Prick of the week was amazingly NiNi. Wakakaka.....

In summary, run was good, food was good, drinks was good, people were all good, therefore all in all everything is good.

Scribbled By
Michael Tan